

GOVERNOR MABEY VISITS CEDAR.

Inspects the Cedar-Long Valley Road—Gives Address in the Evening.

Wednesday noon Governor Mabey and party, consisting of Mrs. Mabey Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Sutton and two daughters, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Shaffer, arrived in Cedar and were entertained by Mayor Swapp and city council, President Mace of the Chamber of Commerce and other prominent members of that organization.

After the governor and his companions had alighted from their cars and shaken off some of the Dixie dust accumulated on their way from St. George, they, with Commissioners H. W. Lunt, H. L. Adams, Berry Williams, Director Cardon of the B. A. C., Wm. Mace and other Cedar citizens sat down to a sumptuous luncheon prepared for the occasion at the Cedars Hotel.

Time being limited, immediately after the luncheon, Governor Mabey Mr. Sutton and Mr. Schaffer were taken up the canyon for an inspection of the Cedar-Long Valley road.

In the evening a meeting was held in the Tabernacle, which was attended by about 250 people. Mr. Sutton, state treasurer, spoke for a few moments, stating that he felt he had complied with the pledges made to the people before his election and making the assertion that the people's money was now being handled in a careful manner and was now deposited in fifty-seven banks of the state, instead of three or four as was the case previous to his election. He also said that the state was drawing 3 per cent interest on deposits, sufficient revenue to pay all the expenses of the treasurer's office.

Director Cardon of the B. A. C. followed Mr. Sutton with a talk regarding the opening of the B. A. C. and his hopes and plans for its success. Mr. Cardon stated that the first three days of registration showed as many students had registered during the three days, as had registered at the end of three weeks in previous years. This was taken by Mr. Cardon as evidence that a keener interest was being taken by the young people of the southern part of the state, in the B. A. C.

The governor then addressed the meeting and in his usual forceful and eloquent style, gave a highly instructive talk on the present conditions of the state in the matter of the apparent financial depression and the hopes held out that it would soon pass; he also spoke of the plans outlined by the officials as to the building of roads to every corner of the state. At this point the governor changed his subject to that of loyalty to the government in which we live, stating that the constitution of the United States was divinely inspired and stands for all that is ideal for man in freedom and the pursuit of happiness. He urged everyone to uphold the constitution, asserting that all should be willing to live and die for the constitution and for the country in which we enjoy liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

The governor spoke of coming to Cedar for the first time seventeen years ago and remarked upon the many changes that had taken place since his departure a few years later. He expressed the opinion that the next fifteen years would see far greater changes and that the population of Cedar would be more than doubled in that time. He asserted that legislation would some day be enacted to compel the corporations to either work their holdings of the valuable resources of Iron county or else turn them over to people who would.

Musical numbers were given by Professor and Mrs. Jas. West and Mrs. Annette Bettenson.

Thursday morning the governor and his party motored to Parowan, accompanied by Commissioners Lunt, Adams and Williams, where the governor delivered a short address to the people, after which the party was taken for a tour of the Breaks via the Parowan canyon.

HOME COURSES
BEING PLANNED.

Department of Home Economics At B. A. C. Arrange Attractions for Housekeepers.

Courses are being arranged at the Branch Agricultural College which doubtless will prove especially attractive to housekeepers during this school year. Already, according to Mrs. Christine B. Clayton, head of the department of Home Economics, a number of women have made application for one or more of these courses; and whenever there are enough applicants to justify it, classes will be organized.

One of the most helpful courses under consideration is known as Diet Nutrition, which is said to include study and instruction in the preparation of balanced meals for the family; in other words it is "family feeding," a subject of the greatest importance to every housewife. If this course is given, it will be from 10:30 to 12, two days a week and from 10:30 to 11:15 three days a week. These successfully completing the course will be given four hours of college credit. Anyone who is interested in this course should communicate with Mrs. Clayton as soon as possible.

Mrs. Clayton is also planning a course in Home Nursing, for which she expects to secure the services of a trained nurse. This course will probably be offered during the spring quarter.

In Domestic Art, three courses probably will be given under the supervision of Miss Urie. These will be drafting, during the fall quarter; sewing, during the winter; and millinery, in the spring. Miss Urie expects to begin the drafting class very soon. It will be from 3 to 5 on Tuesday and Thursday afternoon.

LEASES BIG FOURTEEN MINE.

Andrew Corry, C. C. Bladen, Lafe McConnell and Jos. Farnsworth of this city have leased the Big Fourteen mine from the owners and are now at work drifting on the ore vein and will ship within a week or so.

For the time being it is the intention of the lessees to drift in the neighborhood of fifty feet and block out the ore so that a fair tonnage of the valuable gold and silver ore can be produced daily.

The mine is located in the State-line district, runs very high in value and the ore now encountered has every indication of being large in body.

CHAMPION RAM GIVEN TO THE B. A. C.

No. 11. One of the most valuable rams in the flocks of the Day Farms near Parowan, has been added to the breeding herd of the Branch Agricultural College thru the courtesy of Hon. Wilford Day, state representative from Iron county and president of the Day Farms company. Thru the acquisition of this ram, the Agricultural Department of the Branch College expects to develop one of the best bands of pure bred Rambouillet sheep in the state, because, according to high authorities, there is no finer foundation stock anywhere than that represented by No. 11. Last year Dr. Carroll, head of the Department of Animal Husbandry of the Utah Agricultural College, gave this ram first prize at the county fair. His pedigree and history are not available at this writing, but we are sure of his breeding and record as a performer, because no inferior ram could ever have occupied a prominent place on the Day Farms.

"By making such a valuable contribution to the B. A. C. Mr. Day has rendered signal service to the school and to this region of the state," is the way Director Cardon puts it, "and we are delighted with this splendid expression of his friendly attitude toward the Branch. It is by and with the support of such men that the Branch Agricultural College can be made to serve the great purpose for which it was established."

LAST RITES FOR CEDAR SOLDIER.

Readers of The Record will remember Elmer V. Jespersen, who resided in Cedar with his parents in 1917, and who volunteered for service at the entrance of the United States in the late war.

He was a young man who was well thought of and intensely patriotic. When the call came for volunteers he enlisted at Salt Lake in the 43rd company of the Fifth Marines, August 4, 1917. He saw service from the time of his enlistment until June 3, 1918, when he was killed by a machine gun bullet in the battle of Chateau Thierry, while "going over the top."

After his death his parents went to Ft. Lowell, Arizona, and it was there that the body of their hero son was sent for burial Sept. 2. Impressive services were held under the auspices of the Tuscon Legion post.

We clip the following concerning the funeral services of Private Jespersen from the Arizona Daily Star:

"With impressive military ceremonies the remains of Private Elmer V. Jespersen, who gave his life at Chateau Thierry, were laid to rest Sunday afternoon at the Mormon burial ground at Fort Lowell.

"The funeral of the overseas hero was attended not only by 100 ex-service men in uniform, who took part in the solemn rites, but by many Tuscon civilians, who answered the call and paid tribute to the dead hero. The Legion members, in command of Dr. F. E. Huffman, Morgan McDermott post commander, were well represented. There were fully seventy-five of these at the funeral and about twenty-five from among the government patients at Pastime Park. These boys were driven to and from the funeral by Tusconians, who donated their cars that the sick men might honor the memory of their fallen comrade.

"The funeral services, which were held at 2 o'clock at the Church of Latter-Day Saints at Fort Lowell, was crowded by the relatives of the dead hero and their numerous friends from among the members of the Mormon colony.

The Morgan McDermott post men, under whose auspices the burial was conducted, formed at the Tuscon armory and were driven to the scene of the funeral in cars. The military procession, headed by the firing squad, formed about the casket and marched with it from the church to the cemetery. When the last spadeful of earth had fallen upon the filled grave, taps were sounded by the bugler, after which the nearby mountains re-echoed with the volley fired across the grave.

The five brothers of the fallen hero and an intimate friend were his pall-bearers. There were many tributes, including two elaborate pieces sent by the Morgan McDermott post.

The body of Private Jespersen, which since his killing on the battlefield on June 13, 1918, has filled a grave in the American military cemetery at Chateau Thierry, was disinterred, and with 5,000 other bodies brought to the United States by the U. S. army transport Wheaton.

Private Jespersen enlisted in the Fifth Marines just eleven months before his death from a machine gun bullet while going over the top."

Home Town
Paper Week.

It is very rare that the average newspaper boosts its own business, but gives quantities of space in boosting the affairs of others.

Somebody suggested that it was time for the newspapers of the country to adopt a week in which their own business should be given precedent, and The Record thoroughly endorses the idea.

The date set is the second week in November, from the 7th to the 12th, including that great world event, Armistice Day.

The official title for the week will be "Subscribe For Your Home Town Paper Week."

Thousands of papers will join in this event, and our readers will hear more about it as time goes on.

Ever ready to help in any cause that is in the interests of a better community, better living conditions, and better government, we now ask the readers and advertisers of The Record to turn in and lend a hand during "Subscribe For Your Home Town Paper Week" and boost for us.

LUCY GATES IN CONCERT.

Last Saturday evening Cedar's Tabernacle was filled, when Utah's famous singer Lucy Gates, appeared in a concert, assisted by Miss Frances Grant, pianist.

Some eastern critics have laud of Miss Gates, "She is an American singer not only equal to Galli-Curi, but her superior." Others have gone even further and said, "She has the most wonderful voice I have ever heard."

Miss Gates, last Saturday evening demonstrated to the people of Cedar that this praise was rightly earned. In her rendition of the famous operas, as well as the old fashioned melodies and folk songs, her tones were beautiful and her voice true to the pitch. She has a most pleasing and charming personality.

Miss Gates was born in St. George, Utah, and is the granddaughter of Brigham Young, so Utah may well be proud of her famous songbird.

Miss Frances Grant, the daughter of President Heber J. Grant, who accompanied Miss Gates on her local tour, has just completed a two year study in Boston. She studied at the Fox-Bononic school. Miss Grant appeared in a recital given in 1917 at a Salt Lake theater, with the Salt Lake Philharmonic and in 1918 appeared in a recital with the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra. Miss Grant plays with striking skill and perfect technique.

THE NEED OF THE HOUR.

Work, Honest Work and a Sympathetic Relation Between Men.

To the people of Utah:
"One of the great lessons to be learned from the war is 'preparedness.'"

"To be prepared for any emergency, whether it be military, industrial or economic, is a proper function of statecraft. It is therefore with sincerity and consistency that I call your attention to the present economic condition which prevails throughout the world, with the desire and solicitation that the people of Utah give thoughtful consideration to the problem as it affects this state.

"No one man or group of men is responsible for the present condition. It is the natural aftermath of that gigantic struggle which threatened to engulf civilization. We are in the process of recovery, which can be made easier by the application of individual intelligent effort.

"In viewing the unemployment situation generally it is to be noted that Utah fares much better than many other states, for which much credit is due the loyal business and industrial leaders of our great commonwealth. While we are to be congratulated on this point, and there is no cause for alarm, there rests upon each one of us a serious obligation to do our individual share in providing immediate relief for those who are in distress as a result of unemployment and to co-operate in finding a way to complete restoration to normal economic conditions. It is therefore with a genuine desire to minimize unemployment that I address myself to the people of Utah thru mayors of towns, county commissioners, civic organizations and the press, asking them to approach the problem in each community, providing such relief measures as may seem effective in each circumstance.

"This is a problem for all the people, and your counsel, suggestions and support are earnestly solicited. With the hope that by mutual effort a state wide plan will be evolved thru which effective results may be accomplished, I am transmitting to you the following suggestions and recommendations, asking that they be observed if found meritorious:

"First—People at present are curtailing investments. The reasons are obvious. However, money will find its way back into circulation following the irrevocable economic law. Men cannot be criticized for watching their possessions carefully under existing conditions. The inducement to invest must come from without.

"Second—Wherever an industry is operated upon a twelve, eighteen or twenty-four hour basis, and it is possible so to do, shifts should be divided so as to provide employment for the greatest possible number.

"Third—In institutions where boys or girls are employed and such employment can be carried on equally as well by men or women with dependents, a careful investigation of the necessities of each one should be made and where it is determined that he or she is not required to work for a livelihood a man of family or a woman who has dependents should be substituted.

"Fourth—Where feasible and if found necessary, observe a system of rotation in employment of your people in order that all may have an opportunity to earn something toward meeting living demands. It is well, too, for employers to have first hand information on the home conditions of their employees as far as possible. This will create a sympathetic relationship between employer and employee.

"Fifth—Let us all bear in mind we are in a period of readjustment. It is futile to attempt to impose changes out of keeping with present conditions. Prices of commodities and the wages to be paid are the subjects for most careful thought and the ones affected should bear in mind that the era of extravagance and speculation are over; we are now down to serious thinking and sober action, endeavoring to build on a solid foundation.

"Sixth—Home owners contemplating improvements may find temporary employment for many of the most successful in the history of the Branch Agricultural College is indicated by the fact that the total registration at the close of the third day was equal to the registration at the end of the third week last year, according to a statement issued by Director Cardon. Already classes are organized and regular instruction is under way, altho there are still many students who have not been able to register because of the unusual need for their continued services in the homes and on the farms of this region. There is every assurance of their coming in, however, and it is expected that the final registration will be greater than ever before.

BRANCH A. C.
BEGINS WORK.

Unusually High Registration Marks Opening. Classes Are Well Organized.

That this year may prove to be one of the most successful in the history of the Branch Agricultural College is indicated by the fact that the total registration at the close of the third day was equal to the registration at the end of the third week last year, according to a statement issued by Director Cardon. Already classes are organized and regular instruction is under way, altho there are still many students who have not been able to register because of the unusual need for their continued services in the homes and on the farms of this region. There is every assurance of their coming in, however, and it is expected that the final registration will be greater than ever before.

"It is unfortunate," Mr. Cardon has declared, "that some people have misunderstood the recent action of the faculty regarding a limited registration period. They have apparently interpreted that action as being something new and severe. It is not that, at all. It is just what is done at every high standard institution in the country, the only difference being that at other institutions a late registration fee of two to ten dollars is charged, whereas here there is no such fee. We simply require that the students themselves, when registering late, recognize the fact that they must work harder than would otherwise be necessary in order to catch up with the class. If this is done, the late student will be given full credit for the course; if it is not done, the late student, in fairness to all concerned, cannot expect full credit. Only by some such arrangement can we cover the courses fully and thereby offer the kind of instruction that will make better students and a better school. We must have a definite registration period and a definite time for organizing classes and beginning instruction, if we are to avoid having the opening of school drag over two or three weeks or an even longer period. But this does not prevent students from registering later than the set period, if they so desire; and if they are willing to assume the responsibility of catching up with the early students. Surely, in this there is nothing that is so extraordinary as to cause any alarm among either the parents or the students."

It is plain that the action of the faculty in limiting the first registration period has had a beneficial effect because, according to members of the faculty who have been in service here for a number of years, there never was a time in the history of the institution when school started off with as good attendance and with such an evident spirit of determination on the part of the student and faculty alike to get to work.

any employment for many of the most deserving applicants. Where funds are available for private or public enterprises and where conditions justify, such work should be started. It will stimulate employment and overcome a tendency toward delay and consequent stagnation.

"Seventh—Each community should deal as a unit with its own problems. Some may decide to establish bureaus as a convenient clearing house where unemployed may register and where those who can furnish employment may make the fact known.

"Eighth—People who are unemployed should not leave their home town until they have exhausted all means at their command to find employment where they live. There is too often a disposition on the part of those temporarily out of employment to seek the larger centers. This adds only to the perplexity of the situation and increases the already unwieldy transient population.

"In conclusion this point may be emphasized: Work, honest work, and a sympathetic relation between men seems to be the need of the hour. Utah is happy and fortunate indeed, and it is safe to predict that by careful thought and prompt action on the part of all our citizens we shall emerge safely into an era of confidence and business industrial revival.

"Sincerely yours,
CHAS. R. MABEY Governor.
